SAFEWAY WILL OPEN STORE IN NEW ODD FELLOWS' BUILDING

American Restaurant Will Occupy the Other Store Space

The Safeway Stores plan to occupy the corner store of the new Odd Fellows' building a week from Saturday, according to an Oakland real estate company who negotiated with the Odd Fellows in the matter of the lease. The other store will house a restaurant to be known as the American Grill.

The Safeway store will handle groceries, vegetables, and fruits only, no meat market being planned at the present time. It will probably be managed at the start by employees from Oakland, but as it is the policy of the company to use local help in their stores this management will most likely be for a short time only.

The new restaurant will be run jointly by Andy Paziotis and Gus Makris. Paziotis is now running the Center Grill. According to his announcement, the new establishment will seat sixty to seventy persons at counters, booths and tables, and will be fitted with new equipment both in the kitchen and throughout the restaurant.

Miss Margaret Perry Wed In Piedmont

Edward Vestal and Miss Margaret Ione Perry, of Niles, were united in marriage at the pretty Piedmont home of the groom in the presence of over fifty relatives and friends.

The wedding was followed by a reception for all those present. Refreshments, games and dancing were enjoyed during the evening.

A second reception was held Sunday afternoon at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Mary L. King on the Niles-Decoto road. A wedding feast was prepared for the wedded couple and the guests of the night before.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Vestal left Sunday night for a two weeks' vacation in Southern California. On their return they will live in Piedmont.

The former Miss Margaret Perry is a graduate of the Niles Grammar school. Recently she has been employed in the office of Dr. E. C. Grau.

R. PETERSON IS NEW MANAGER OF ABROTT'S STORE

C. R. Abrotts hardware store has been leased by R. Peterson, the papers having been signed the early part of the week. Since Mr. Abrotts death some time ago the business has been run by his estate.

Under the new management, the store will be known as The Winchester Store.

A. M. Alves who has been the manager of the store, will be kept on for the time being, according to Peterson. The store will continue with the same full line of hardware goods, and other articles as in the past.

Although Peterson has no definite information to divulge, it is understood that he plans to take in a partner in the near future.

DECOTO GRAMMAR SCHOOL ISSUES TEN-PAGE PAPER

"The Decoto Bee," official publication of the Decoto grammar school, came out with a ten-page edition last Friday. The "Bee" promises to buzz throughout the present 'erm, a period when all other bees are holing up for the winter.

The entire paper is mimeographed, but it's clever set-up and editing make it A-1 among mimeographed publications. It is entirely supported by advertisements from twenty Decoto business firms. Clever drawings by the students have even been used to illustrate the advertisments.

In one case, through a process known only to the staff, a cut used by one of the firms in its regular advertisements has been reproduced.

The editorial staff has covered every phase of the school's activities in its writings. The school's undefeated athletic teams come in for a big share of the write-ups, brief accounts of each victory since the beginning of the term being given.

TUNNEL PROGRESS OF HETCH-HETCHY WORK MAY LET UP

Plan to Rush Water To San Francisco In Six Months

Work on the Hetch-Hetchy project tunnel near Mission San Jose may be almost completely shut down if either of two plans submitted to the San Francisco Board of Supervisors for rushing an additional water supply to the city are adopted by the board.

A water shortage confronts the city, and as the Coast Range tunnels of the Hetch-Hetchy project will not be completed for approximately two and one-half years, botb of the plans for adding temporarily to the water supply will insure additional water reaching San Francisco inside of six months.

The one plan calls for a temporary pipe-line over the Altemont pass allowing Hetch-Hetchy waters to flow into the present Sunol gravel beds. The other plan entails a thirteen-mile pipeline connecting the East Bay system with the San Francisco mains and purchasing water from the East Bay Municipal Utilities District.

If either of the plans are adopted, all progressive work on the present tunnels will be temporarily stopped. There would be kept busy on the works only a crew sufficient to maintain the structures and progress already attained. Then as soon as water reached San Francisco, via the temporary route, progressive work on the Hetch-Hetchy project would again be ressmed.

No definite step has yet been taken on ithr plan.

COW TESTS SHOW MORE BUTTER FAT

Two Newark Herds Rank High in Unit One For Butter Fat

MANY COWS TESTED

Irvington Herd Takes Third Place in Unit Two

According to the October reports of the Farm Bureau Cow Testing Association in Alameda county the herds of R. E. Albertsen and the California Milk Company, both of Newark, took second and third places respectively among unit No. 1 herds for butter fat production.

R. E. Albertsen has one cow with a production of 69 pounds of fat.

High cow in the herd of Joe Bauhofer, of Centerville, produced 70.6 pounds of fat.

Several herds in Unit No. 1 averaged 30 pounds or more of fat per cow.

There were six herds in the class average of 25 to 30 pounds per cow and but two herds averaged under 25 pounds fat per cow.

The average production of all cows in unit No. 1 was 769.7 pounds of milk and 28.75 pounds of butterfat. There are now 1888 cows in this unit. Of this number 199 were tested for production. Their total milk production was 1,434,323 pounds of milk and a butterfat production of 54,279 pounds. This is more than 27 tons of fat.

This unit has averaged 2.71 pounds of fat more in October than in September, on the basis of all cows in Unit No. 1. There is a big increase in number of cows producing 40 pounds or more of fat. In October there were 443 cows in this class as against 286 in September. There was more weeding done during October, too. Sixty-one cows were weeded out as against 26 in September. Dairy members seem to be studying the herd sheets of individual cows.

California Milk Company and Zwissig Brothers, of Decoto, have the greatest number of cows producing 40 pounds of fat or more. The California Milk Company had 97 cows and Zwissig Brothers 88 cows in this class.

Among Unit No. 2, J. P. Silveira, of Irvington, took third place with an average per cow of 30.9 pounds of fat.

The average butterfat production for all cows in Unit No. 2 during October was 27.7 pounds. This is an average increase per cow of 1.4 pounds over the month of September.

During October 363 cows as against 316 in September produced 40 pounds or more of fat.

Sixteen hundred and fifty-two cows are now in Unit No. 2 and of this number 1346 are milking.

Eighty-one and four-tenths per cent of the cows in this unit are milking.

Members of Unit No. 2 weeded out 28 cows during October as a result of studying production records on the herd sheets of individual cows.

Members Accept Parent-Teachers' Offer Of Luncheon

Introduction of the guests was the first item of business at the Niles Chamber of Commerce luncheon in the Florence Restaurant, Tuesday noon.

Gordon B. Laing, horticultural commissioner for Alameda county; Max J. Leonard, horticultural commissioner for Del Monte county; Fred Drew, of Sunnyvale, and Hugh Sinclair, engineer at Pleasanton were introduced. E. A. Ellsworth was cordially welcomed, at it was his first luncheon since returning from his vacation trip.

A letter from the Parent-Teachers' Association inviting the members to accept their offer to sponsor a luncheon for the chamber on December 16 was read, and the invitation was unamimously accepted. The proceeds of the luncheon are for the benefit of the association.

One hundred dollars has been collected toward the Boy Scout quota, according to a committee report. This work will continue.

On the night-watchman question, which was the chief topic of business at their last meeting two weeks ago, it was brought out that the paid up subscription list amounted to one hundred and fifteen dollars, according to Roderick's records. Roderick has also promised to pay the balance on the insurance before a month has gone by. The old committee of J. E. Townsend, F. V. Jones, and H. B. EDITORIAL COMMENT

By NORMAN H. PARKS, Publisher Register

WHAT'S THE USE

We used to be emphatically for the initiative and referendum. Now we are not so sure. The referendum we are still inclined to believe a safeguard of the people rights, and a curb on corrupt or incompetent legislators.

The initiative, however, in the last election proved an infernal nusiance. Practically every amendment and proposition voted upon was initiated by some group of individuals who were seeking some tax reduction or special privilege of some sort or other. The worst legislature that the state has ever been cursed with, would hardly have dared attempt to pass most of these measures that California voters were asked to approve in the recent election. Fortunately, nearly all of them were voted down.

The average person can not discriminate between the meritorious amendments and the vicious or silly measures put on the ballot. In self-protection, a great body of men and women vote "no" on everything. Even then one is not sure he is right. Clever lawyers becloud the language of these measures, and often even when an intelligent man thinks he is disapproving by his vote in fact he is endorsing the proposition.

But why mention the fact; the initiative and referendum is with us, and as a whole good or bad, it will be with us long after the writer has interviewed Saint Peter for a pass into heaven.

OF LITTLE IMPORTANCE

Someone very close to Secretary Ray Wilbur has written the editor of this paper, criticising his editorial of October 2 with the title, "CRASS." It referred to the attempt of the secretary of the interior to hitch the Hoover name to the Boulder Canyon project.

The missive was not signed. Anonymous correspondents are ignored in all well-regulated newspaper offices. If one lacks the courage to sign his or her name to a written opinion, that opinion is of little or no weight in or out of a newspaper office.

While we drew some conclusions in this editorial, we have since learned, from some very high sources, that we were absolutely correct in every essential detail, and our insinuations hit a very weak spot in the interior department.

As a fitting finale to the whole affair at Las Vegas, some two months ago, the writer suggests that the railroad cut-off from that city to the dam site be named the "Chandler Cut-Off." in honor of another patriot who had done so much in this giant undertaking. The Hoover Dam and the Chandler Cut-Off! The analogy is complete.

MOTORCYCLES WILL CARRY RECEIVING SETS WHILE PATROLING STATE ROADS

Research Experiments Are Now Being Carried On by State

SPECIAL RADIO 'PHONES

Mather Field will Be Broadcasting Point, Plans Indicate

Research experiments are being made by the California Highway Patrol to determine the possibility of establishing radio telephonic connections between highway patrolmen working on their beats and their district and central offices, it was announced this week.

A special type of radio telephone light enough to be carried on a motorcycle but powerful enough to have a range of several hundred miles is being considered it was stated. If successful this will enable the district inspector or squad captain to get in immediate communication with his men in case of accident or any other reason necessitating a quick move of officers from one place to another.

The preliminary plan of experiment involves the establishment of a 200-watt transmitter at the headquarters of the highway patrol traffic school at Mather Field near Sacramento.

Four cars equipped with receiving sets will be sent to different parts of the state to pick up the messages sent out from the transmitter. One of these will operate in the extreme northern counties, another in the southern counties, another along the coast and a fourth in the interior valley.

These cars will make daily observation to determine where the so-called "dead spots" are located.

Information secured by the patrols indicates radio telephone are being used to good advantage by police patrols in a number of American cities, a notable success having been attained with them in Detroit.

Perfect communication, however, has this far been possible where the distance between transmitters and receivers is relatively small.

The problem of the California patrol is to work out a system by which the officer may communicate with superiors and receive their orders when at a considerable distance from his base.

Commenting on the experiments Frank G. Snook, chief of the division of motor vehicles, declared highway law enforcement work in California would be revolutionized if they are successful.

"Under present conditions we have no quick and sure means of getting in touch with our men on the highways in case they are needed to clear up a traffic jam or to give aid in accidents." he said. "The men are required to telephone headquarters from points along the line but this system is slow and the need for the officers is frequently gone before we can get in touch with them.

"The radio telephone would enable us to get in immediate touch with the men and to send them wherever needed without delay or confusion."

FOOTBALL DINNER FOR AMADOR HIGH SQUAD PLANNED

Date For Banquet Depends On Recovery of Anselmo

Members of the Student Body of the Amador High School, Pleasanton, have made preparations for the annual Football Dinner which is given to members of the team at the close of the season. Last year the meal was prepared by the cooking class but this year it has not been decided who will prepare the banquet because there is no cooking class.

It is thought that a special class may be arranged under the direction of Mrs. Anita Smith, teacher of home economics, for this occasion.

The date for the dinner has not been set because of the injury to Julius Anselmo, varsity end, which makes it impossible to exactly know when he will be able to attend.

DAVE ROYCE GETS THIRTY DAYS IN COUNTY PRISON

Judge Gale Sentences Man For Drunkenness on Streets

Dave Royce, Hotch Hetchy worker, was sentenced to thirty days in the county jail by Judge Chas. A. Gale in the Pleasanton City Court Monday morning following a plea of guilty to drunkeness.

Royce was arrested by Night Watchman Antone Petersen, of Pleasanton, late Sunday night night when the man was found in an intoxicated condition on Main street.

Judge Gale declared that he was tired of the manner in which the drunks come to Pleasanton and cause a disturbance upon the streets nearly every week-end and that in the future he will hand out jail sentences instead of just ordering them from town as has been the practice in the past.

Royce was taken to the county jail Monday afternoon by Chief Wm. T. Davis.

BIGGER AND BETTER

PRESENTING

THE NEW CHEVROLET SIX

Today the Chevrolet Motor Company presents the Bigger and Better Chevrolet Six, a new model of the six-cylinder car which has enjoyed such wide popularity. In both the chassis and body, you will find expressed, as never before, Chevrolet's well-known policy of progress through constant improvement.

The new Chevrolet is longer, lower and strikingly smart. The radiator has been deepened and its appearance enhanced by a curving tie-bar and chrome-plated parabolic headlamps. The long hood sweeps back gracefully into the new body lines. And never was Fisher's fine craftsmanship more evident than in the bodies of the new Chevrolet Six! They are roomier, more comfortable, and throughout exhibit that attention to detail which is the basis of true quality.

Mechanically, too, the new Chevrolet Six is better. The wheelbase is longer. The frame stronger. The steering easier. The clutch more durable. There is a smoother, quieter transmission. Wherever finer materials and more advanced design could increase Chevrolet quality and economy—improvement has been made. The new Chevrolet Six is an outstanding achievement—it is the Great American Value!

» » AT NEW LOW PRICES « «

Chevrolet has long been one of the lowest priced cars in the world. Yet due to the savings of volume production and increased manufacturing efficiency, the Bigger and Better Chevrolet is offered at new low prices. Come in today. See and drive the new Chevrolet Six. Learn the economy of owning a modern, fine quality, six-cylinder automobile.

CONCRETE BRIDGES REPLACE HISTORICAL WOODEN ONES OVER CRADNDALL'S SLOUGH

Straw Road of Fifty Years Ago Is Now Broad Paved Highway

Crandall's Slough, where it crosses the Alvarado-Centerville road, is being modernly bridged at a cost of about $75,000. The work, begun over a month ago, is being done by a San Francisco contractor under the strictest of county supervision, and will continue for about three months more.

Two bridges, less than one hundred yards apart, are being built. The larger one contains four rows of piers for support with a bulkhead wall at each end of the bridge. The other has three rows of supporting piers and two bulkheads, one at each end. Both bridges will be of re-enforced concrete throughout.

Test holes were the first step of the work. By means of a massive beam lever and sand boxes enormous pressure was brought to bear on the bottom of a test hole. A scale showed the amount of "give" produced in the hole's bottom. In this way solid ground which would bear the weight of the bridge was found, and all foundations were then laid on this underground layer, holes being dug for that purpose.

Foundations of all piers and bulkheads are approximately ten feet below the surface soil. The foundation trenches were dug with a gasoline scoop shovel.

In each trench was then laid the footing for one row of piers. Thus the five piers in each row have a single solid footing, and this tends to prevent even the slightest settling at any one soft point. The end trenches of course contain the bulkhead foundations.

At the present time, the bulkheads, footings, and piers are constructed up to road level. The bridge roadway has yet to be constructed.

The two old wooden bridges, which are being replaced, were built about 1881, according to Antone George, roadmaster of the section. George was just a boy when the bridges were first built. In those days winter torrents raged down Crandall's slough, and in 1911 Machado Corners, where George lives, was flooded.

A. J. Rodrigues, of Centerville, can remember when there were no bridges across Crandall's Slough. He recalls a time in 1878 when people living on the Alvarado side of the slough had to go around by Niles in order to reach Centerville, because of flood waters. Before the slough was bridged the Alvarado-Centerville road became a jumble of ruts during the summer. The farmers would contribute straw to be laid in the ruts and also to keep the dust down. This straw road was often aflame because of some careless traveler, according to Rodrigues.

In 1884 the winter waters in Crandall's Slough were materially lessened because, for some unknown reason, Butchertown Slough, down nearer Alvarado, opened up from Alameda Creek which feeds both sloughs. Since then Crandall's Slough has been practically dry except for occasional floods.

The old bridges, built in 1881, served up till one month ago, with constant care and upkeep on the part of each successive road commissioner. As time went on the road was graveled and finally paved. Now a concrete road, with concrete bridges has replaced what once was a straw covered, bridgless road, little more than a wagon track. All this has taken place within the memory of living men.

LAST WEEK WAS DEMONSTRATION WEEK FOR NASH

Last week was "Demonstration Week" at the Centerville Nash Company. A new sedan of the "Eight-70" series was shipped in especially for this purpose.

The object of the week was to give everybody a ride in the new car. Those who wished were allowed to drive it.

W. C. Look, the new manager of the company, says that he would like every week from now on to be demonstration week for the people of Centerville and Washington township. He wishes to extend the same cordial invitation to come in and ride and drive in the future as was extended this past week.

Look, who has recently purchased the company from Edward George, was formerly the owner of a super service station in Gustine, California. Since taking over the Centerville business, he has kept all the former employees of the company, and hopes to keep all the former friends as well.

Mrs. Look also helps her husband in his business. Both she and her husband are the kind of people who are a credit to any community,—humble, unpretentious, friendly, and hard working.

NARCOTIC VENDOR IS ARRAIGNED BY LOCAL MAGISTRATE

Three narcotic vendors were arraigned Tuesday afternoon before Judge Allen G. Norris. The men are Fidel Salcedo, Eurico Sebaltos, and Pedro Gianero. They were arrested by C. A. Wheeler, federal narcotic agent, when they drove up to one of the resorts in Alvarado's "Little Tiajuana" to make a delivery of "marihuana."

The drug is dried and smoked, and when growing it so closely resembles corn that it would pass all detection in a cornfield except by an expert. The agents plan to make a close inspection of every corn field around Alvarado and Newark next spring in order to find the local source of supply.

The three men will be examined next Tuesday in Judge Norris' court.

Central Avenue Improvements Progress

Central avenue has been scraped and graded and will soon be graveled and oiled, according to a road improvement program under the supervision of the county commissioners.

About two hundred yards from Main street a concrete culvert draining both sides of the road has been built. The culvert leads into a cesspool and will take care of all flood waters which may drain down from the pavement of Main street.

Election of officers for the ensuing year was held during the business meeting. After the business meeting, the class of 1930 was presented.

Members of the class who were presented were: Mrs. Ralph Emerson and Mr. and Mrs. R. Jury, of Centerville; Miss Millicent Oliver, of Mt. Eden; Persons Brown, of San Leandro: and Mrs. Laura Orelli, Wm. Logan and Miss Bernice Boyd, of Alvarado.

Other members of the class who were not able to be present at this meeting were: Dr. and Mrs. Eugene Grau, of Niles: Miss Lois Abrott, of Oakland; Mrs. Alice Coram, of Alameda; and Mrs. Violet Emerson and Ralph Emerson, of Centerville.

After a most enjoyable evening delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. B. Brown, of Newark, chairman of the refreshment committee, assisted by her committee. The dining room was beautifully decorated in autumn colorings and designs.

"Book Week" Is Celebrated At School

Last week was "Book Week" at the Washington Union high school. The climax of the week was a dress parade at the Friday afternoon assembly in which students dressed to represent some book character.

Another feature of the week was a fine picture display of well known authors. These pictures were obtained by G. I. Knoles, director of the celebration, from the head of the book department in San Francisco.

The pictures include a rare view of Jack London; one of Emerson Hugh standing near a covered wagon; and a picture of James Olliver Curwood coming up the trail with his kill.

Vernon Goold, one of the members of the faculty of Washington Union High School, has a leave of absence until after Christmas on account of illness. Mrs. E. B. Hodges is taking his place.

MANY BANTAMS IN POULTRY SHOW THIS YEAR

After tonight no more entries will be accepted for the Hayward Poultry Show to be held from November 26 to 30, in the Native Sons' Hall. It will be necessary to return all late entries because of the limited space available for the show. The officials and judges will be virtually the same as last year. Premium lists are now available, several hundred having already ben mailed to local poultrymen.

Bantams will be especially numerous this year, according to the committee in charge. Two exhibitors alone have promised as many birds in the midget classes as have been present at either of the previous Hayward shows.

A banquet in connection with the show has been arranged for Saturday, November 29, at a Hayward hotel.

Visitors will have no trouble finding the Native Son's Hall, which is at Main and "C" streets because large yellow arrow signs will be placed on all the main highways and streets directing the way to the show.

Entries should be left with O. B. Hunt, of Hayward, manager of the show, or with Poisal's Hatchery, Poisal being president of the club sponsoring the affair.

merited the final discussion of the session. The chamber seemed to be divided in their opinion at first; the one faction maintaining that it was a disgrace and should be torn down. The other headed by William Kirk, contending that it was not worth troubling with and if left alone would finally be consumed by worms and general detorioration..

The two factions were finally united in the opinion that it should be removed. Kirk offered to remove it for the lumber it contained. His offer was not accepted because the Hansen Lumber Company promised to send in a sealed bid giving their offer for tearing it down, according to a representative who was present. Stark Register Found In Creek Near Castlewood

Mystery of Camp Thefts Are Cleared Up With Confessions

RUIN STOLEN MACHINE

Automobile Is Fired While Stealing Gasoline, Thugs State

More than half a dozen robberies in the various Hetch Hetchy camps in this district were solved last week following the arrest of Martin Grey, 40, and Charles Walker, 34, wanted in connection with the robbery of the Pleasanton Auto Wreckers' office, Deputy Sheriff Hugo Rodbruch announced.

The two men were arrested at Auburn Friday and returned by Deputy Sheriffs Radbrach and L. E. Van Patten, and Constable Albert E. Vervais. The arrests were made by the Auburn sheriff, who with all other sheriffs of the state had been notified of the number of the car the bandits were driving, which was stolen.

Two weeks ago while Hayman Stark, owner of the wrecking firm, was out of the office and his employees were in the rear of the plant, the two men entered the office and being unable to open the cash register, carted it away. One of the employees, Chick Forrester, noticed the men as they were leaving, and obtained the license number of the car. It was learned that the car was a stolen one.

There was $12 in cash in the register and all of the company's pink slips for the motors which were being dismantled. After the thugs were arrested they informed officers where the register might be found, in the creek at the Castlewood Country Club. The cash register was found. It had been forced open and the money extracted, the robbers having left sixty cents in change, however.

The three officers went to Auburn for the men and the automobile, but it was found that the car was too badly damaged to be of any use. The thugs confessed according to Radbruch that while stealing gasoline and using matches to see if the tank was full caused a slight explosion which practically demolished the top and upholstering.

The men were captured because of the suspicious manner in which they acted when approached by a farmer near Auburn upon whose land they were preparing to camp. The farmer notified the sheriff who came to investigate and recognized the license number as that of a missing car.

Both Walker and Grey were arraigned before Justice Clark in Livermore late Saturday. They will be given their preliminary hearing this week, it was said.

According to Radbruch the men have confessed the seven robberies which they committeed in and about Pleasanton, clearing up several of the thefts at the bunk houses of the Hetch Hetchy camps both near Sunol and Livermore. Practically all of the clothing and jewelry taken in those robberies have been recovered.

The finger prints of the men, which were sent to Sacramento for identification and records, have not been returned as yet. The robbers are termed as "hard" by the officers, who stated that getting confessions from them was a difficult task.

STRUTTERS' BALL THIS SATURDAY AT DANVILLE HALL

"If you haven't heard them, now is the time to do it," A. A. Bardy, who presents the Strutters Ball in the I. O. O. F. Hall at Danville, Saturday night, November 22, declared this week referring to Sax Serias and his colored rhythm masters.

The colored band which plays for Brady has won for itself a real reputation among the dance patrons of this district, and whenever they are scheduled to play, a capacity attendance is assured.

As usual, when Brady produces a dance, there will be plenty of surprises and specialties in store for the dancers, and the Strutters Ball at Danville Saturday night will be no exception.

FLAMES THREATEN NEWARK HOME MONDAY

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Pontney caught fire Monday evening. The Newark fire department extinguished the blaze which did little damage.

The fire was caused, it is thought, by sparks which escaped from the chimney into the attic. It was discovered by Mrs. Pontney when flames ate through the wall into the kitchen.

Louis Ruschin, fire chief, worked for some little time to make sure that no smouldering embers remained between the walls or in the attic.

IMPROVEMENTS ARE BADLY NEEDED IN PLEASANTON CITY JAIL; NOT FIT FOR HUMAN HABITATION

Comparison With Other Prisons Show It As Sadly Needing Change

COUNTY BASTILE IS GOOD

Visit To Various Institutions Show Others Considerate of Prisoners

Alameda count has a jail of which every citizen may be proud. There are all of the "comforts of home," if such a term can be used in connection with any place of confinement, to be found in the county prison at Oakland.

The writer had the opportunity of visiting the prison recently and was amazed to find the type of bastile conducted, as the usual thought in connection with a county jail is that it is just a place where the prisoners exist.

Possibly the first thing which attracts attention is the lack of the stench of disinfectant which is so prevalent in jails. In the Alameda county jail the air is clean, the floors are clean, the bedding is clean, and the prisoners are clean.

The writer is indebted to G. A. Bradbury, assistant chief jailer, for the trip through the prison.

On the lower floor is a laundry in which the cleaning for the entire prison is done. All the help is selected from the prisoners, no outside aid being employed in any department. There is the latest type of laundry machinery from washers to driers and ironers.

On the first floor are the receiving tanks where the new prisoners are housed for the first few days.

On the second floor are the time servers, those who have committed misdemeanors, but are not classed as criminals.

The third floor houses the felons, the robbers, highwaymen, holdupmen, bandits, murderers. This is the only floor in the entire prison in which there appeared to be a lack of cleanliness marking the other portions of the jail. This n ay be due to the fact that a larger number of men are housed in smaller quarters. This floor also houses the "hop heads" and Chinamen.

Possibly the second item which strikes a visitor is the lack of cigarette stubs, ashes and other debris upon the floors. The management of the prison is to be congratulated upon the system of personal sanitation which is evidently forced upon the prisoners.

The jail is thoroughly painted in bright colors, well lighted. both from windows and electric bulbs. In each section there is a radio loud speaker.

Upon the top floor of the building are the kitchen, hospital and matron's quarters. Seventeen men are used in the kitchen which prepares the food for from 150 to 250 men daily, including the officers. They work on twenty-four hour shifts, as no prisoner is ever sent to a cell hungry. The kitchen crew apparently has the best of the work and quarters. There is a small recreation room and shower baths in the kitchen tier.

There is a standing invitation to the residents of the county to visit the prison according to Bradbury.

Perhaps if residents of Pleasanton and Pleasanton township were to visit the county jail and then upon their return home walk over back of the fire house and see what passes for a prison there, it might be that some action could be gotten toward fitting the local bastile up until it would be fit for human habitation.

At present the Pleasanton city jail, while clean, has no comforts and is unheated, making it terrible to place a prisoner in it over night.

It would not be surprising, according to some. if a prisoner put into the Pleasanton jail should come down with pneumonia, because of lack of proper comforts, and the city find itself faced with a damage suit.

When the grand jury was investigating jails last year, it is reliably reported that it did not force the issue there because it was given to understand that the jail was soon to be improved. That was a year ago, and still the jail remains the same.

INVENTION TAKES DISTORTION FROM ORCHESTRA MUSIC

Charasterizing the radio invention of Leopold Stokowski as one of the greatest broadcasting advancements in years, Vieux Brothers, local Philco dealer, Monday predicted a revolution in the art of broadcasting.

Their opinion is based upon the widespread comment aroused by the all-Wagner concert broadcast Sunday over the NBC network by the Phildelphia Orchestra conducted by Doctor Stokowski. This program was sponsored by the Philadelphia Storage Battery Company, manufacturers of Philco radios.

In this broadcast was used an invention of Doctor Stokowski's designed to lessen the distortion in broadcasting music. The device, first used on October 12, has since been improved and critics agree that it greatly improves the quality of the music.

Because the apparatus is not perfected, very little information is given out concerning it; but it is generally understood that the device is operated by the conductor while the broadcast is taking place.

TRAFFIC TIED UP MONDAY EVENING IN DUBLIN CANYON

Two Cars Almost Totally Block Highway For Hour

Traffic through Dublin canyon was nearly blocked Monday evening because of the collision of two automobiles on the hill just beyond the Boomer grade.

The cars of L. H. Gilbert and V. A. Spring, both of Hayward, figured in the accident. According to reports Gilbert stopped his car on the highway when something fell from his trailer. Spring, coming down the hill shortly after, did not realize the Gilbert car was parked until he was nearly upon it. He was unable to pass as two machines coming in the opposite direction were passing at the time.

Spring was forced to crash into the rear of the trailer. The Spring car swung around over the center portion of the road, leaving only a strip wide enough for one car.

A wheel was knocked off and the steering gear broken on the Spring car, while the trailer of Gilbert's machine was badly wrecked. Neither man was hurt.

The Mission San Jose "Indians" baseball club celebrated their success with a banquet at the Florence Restaurant, Thursday night in Niles. The affair was a great success. Mat Whitfield, manager of the club acted as toastmaster, and for the appreciation of his services, the club presented him with a token of their appreciation. The president of the Valley League was a special guest. He complimented the team on their fine sportsmanship and their playing ability. They gave Berryessa, the champs, a good run, losing out by a single game.

Besides taking the "kitty" purse put up by all the teams entering the league, the local team copped all the other prizes.

Bill Telles led the league in hitting. He batted .515 for the season. He got 35 hits and crossed the home rubber 24 times. He receives a pair of spikes from San Jose Hardware Company. In addition to this he brought in the most runs, but as he had already taken a prize, the bat will go to "Midget" Silveria. Manuel Fontes swatted ont five homers for which he will receive a glove from the San Jose Hardware Co.

Mrs. Antone Medrios, who was unfortunate in an accident which occurred two weeks ago in the front of the high school, has returned to her home. Her condition is very low.

THE DOUBLE CROSS

by A. E. THOMAS

W.N.U. SERVICE

Copyright By Dodd, Mead and Company, Inc.

Two persons enter into a conspiracy against a third one. One of the conspirators is not true to the compact. Secretly he informs the third party or takes other action that defeats the conspiracy and throws the burden on his trusting partner Such is the origin of the term, double cross. It has had various modifications and applications until it has come to mean almost any underhanded gaining of confidence and subsequent betrayal. Beginning as a slang term, it was too expressive to remain so, and is now a recognized figure of speech. A singularly wicked form of the double cross is the basis for this story A man proves recreant to the most sincere form of friendship, recreant to the partner who held him in the closest regard, aided him over rough places, paid his debts and persistently excused or overlooked his faults. The most dastardly action was when the false friend came between the true one and the woman he loved

Written by a successful playwright, the story is essentially dramatic, crisp in dialogue and realistic in action. The metropolitan setting is used with fine effect to produce atmosphere and characterization. The absorbing elements of the plot are rendered more fascinating by a vein of subtlety and mystery leading to an unexpected climax near the end. The story might appropriately be termed the triple cross, for the double crosser himself becomes the victim of one whom he trustingly took into his enterprise.

CHAPTER I.—Jim Stanley, wealthy young New York business man, unable to concentrate in his dictation to his desk audiphone, has the machine taken to his home, intending to finish his work there. Rollin Waterman, his business partner and closest friend, comes in Both men are avowedly in love with Doris Colby Stanley proposes they toss a coin to determine which of them shall, that evening, first ask her to marry him Waterman wins

CHAPTER II.—Nina Morgan, Waterman's secretary, also his mistress, has overheard his conversation with Stanley and resents Waterman's plans to desert her. Waterman tells her he is practically penniless and must make a rich marriage. He urges Nina to go to Doris and tell her she (Nina) has been wronged—but by Stanley. The girl consents, on Waterman's promise to take care of her.

CHAPTER III.—Doris admits to her father her interest in both Stanley and Waterman, and is sure they are both in love with her, but she is unable to make up her mind which to marry

CHAPTER IV.—Nina goes to Doris with her story, securing a promise that Doris will not reveal the source of her information. She convinces Doris of Stanley's duplicity, and leaves her broken hearted, and realizing that it is Stanley she really has loved

CHAPTER V.—Waterman that evening asks Doris to marry him, and she, believing Stanley unworthy, accepts him. According to the arrangement, Stanley appears, to learn his rival has won. He accepts the situation, and as a wedding present gives his share of the business to Waterman. Next day he arranges with his secretary, Frank Wilson, to take charge of his other business interests. He is going to India.

CHAPTER VI.—Doris, unable to put Stanley completely out of her mind, tells Waterman part of Nina's story. He promises to "try" to find the girl, so that full corroboration can be made. Waterman is deeply in debt to a gambler, Bromfield, and the latter presses for payment. Waterman quiets him by the news of his engagement to the wealthy Doris Colby.

CHAPTER VII.—Waterman makes a financial arrangement with Nina which will insure her silence.

CHAPTER VIII.—Frank Wilson, who has long been aware of Waterman's crooked business methods and his debts, sees Nina at the wedding, and vague suspicions are aroused in him. He leaves Waterman's employ, The latter begins to importune Doris for money, ostensibly for the "business" but actually for gambling purposes.

CHAPTER IX.—At Waterman's urging Doris wears her magnificent diamond necklace, which had been her dead mother's, to the opera. That night it disappears. Doris' father enlists Bromfield's aid in tracing the stones (the gambler's wide underworld acquaintance making him a likely party to get information about the gems), and is apparently satisfied with the results of Bromfield's efforts.

he said. "Remember—on Saturday."

She looked at him a little pitifully. "Good night," she said, and to the Swami, "Good night, sir. I do hope you will come and see me again."

"Madam, I thank you. Good evening." The Swami turned to Waterman. "Sir," he said and bowed again.

"Sir to you," responded Waterman genially, swaying ever so slightly on his heels.

Stanley glanced uneasily from his friend's wife to his friend—but there was nothing to do. Unhappy, he departed. . . .

Stanley passed an unhappy night. His first impulse was to get in touch with Wilson. Not, he reflected, that Wilson was likely to know anything that he wished to know, and yet he might. Still, ought he to talk to anyone about it? How far had this kind of thing gone?

Returning to his hotel in the taxi, the silence was presently broken by the Swami. "The lady has a sweet spirit," he said.

"No one knows that better than I," answered Stanley.

"She is not happy."

"I'm afraid not."

"Her life is not harmonious. There are discords."

"What do you mean?" But the Swami would say no more.

Stanley did not go to Waterman's office the next morning. He did not wish to see him at present. He found it difficult to pardon what he had seen the night before. In the past he had forgiven his friend for many things and now he tried to do him justice. "Idiotic of me," he thought, "to be so disturbed about such a trifle!" Yet disturbed he was and he decided to postpone his talk with Waterman. Instead of keeping that appointment, he telephoned to Wilson, got a motor, and after lunch started for the country.

The sun was warm, the air was still. The motor moved silently, smoothly, with effortless power, as if traveling through the picture of a dream. For a time Jim Stanley was at peace. He said little to Wilson, and asked no questions whatever. Wilson on his part respected his companion's mood. He, too, was happy—happier than he had been in a long time. He was content to be near the man he loved.

Stanley's place in the country had many characteristics of the English manor house. It was rather low, rambling and informal, comfortable and cheerful.

A winding private road, perhaps an eighth of a mile in length, brought the motor to the door. Jefferson, a middle-aged servant who had grown up in the Stanley family, and who had been the caretaker during Jim's absence, stood upon the doorstep to greet his employer.

The tour of the house which followed was brief. Stanley knew that with Jefferson in charge all had been well. Presently the trio reached the library.

"Jefferson," said Stanley, "I mean to occupy the house from now on, at least until spring. So you had betetr get things going at once. How much of a staff have we at present?"

"Just myself, the gardener, and the housekeeper, sir."

"You see, Mr. Stanley," explained Wilson, "when you went away so suddenly, you didn't give me any instructions: so I did what I thought you'd like and cut down expenses to the minimum."

"Quite right, quite right. Well, Jefferson, recruit the staff at once. I suppose we'll need the usual lot, eh?"

"Yes, sir. And, er—do you wish me to engage a chauffeur, sir?"

"That reminds me," said Wilson. "I met O'Hara last week. I think he'd like to come back, if you want him."

"Surely, surely—get him by all means. Good fellow, O'Hara."

"How soon do you wish to occupy the house, sir?"

"I'll come down on Friday, if you can be ready?"

"Oh, certainly, with ease, sir."

"And on Saturday I shall have a few friends for the week-end. That's all for now, Jefferson."

As the butler went out Stanley lighted a cigarette, and looked about the room.

"Well," he said, "it's home, anyhow. And now, Frank, this is as good time as any, I suppose, to thank you for all you've done while I've been away."

"I've done my best, sir."

"And no one could have done better."

"And why not? Everything I've got in the world I owe to you."

"Oh, well, I did myself a good turn when I did you one. It's often like that. By the way, I suppose I'd better give Jefferson some money." He felt in his pockets. "Hm, not much in here."

"How much did you want, sir? Perhaps I can—"

"Never mind. There must be an old check book in that desk somewhere. Just take the cover off and we'll see."

Wilson lifted the sheet from the desk.

"Hello," said Stanley, "what's that?" he indicated the mechanical contrivance which stood revealed upon the desk.

"Oh, yes," answered Wilson, "it's your audiphone."

"So it is. What's it doing here?"

But Wilson remembered everything that concerned Stanley. "Don't you recall, sir? The last day you were in your office you told me to send it down here? You were going to clean up a lot of correspondence over Sunday. O'Hara brought it down."

"That's so. I remember. And then I went to India." He searched vaguely in one of the drawers of the desk, saying as he did so, "Funny things happen to us. Now, if anybody had told me, when I instructed you to send this thing down here, that I should start for India the next week, I'd have thought he was crazy. Ah, here we are." Producing the check book, he took his fountain pen and began to fill it out.

"Well," handing Wilson the check, "give that to Jefferson before we leave. I hope it's good, as Rollin used to say. I haven't balanced my book lately." He looked at the secretary and smiled at this feeble joke. But Wilson did not smile back. There was nothing about Waterman that could amuse him any more.

Stanley missed the answering smile. Then he yielded to the temptation he had been resisting. "Speaking of Rollin," he said, "I want to ask you something. I saw him a moment last night. Er—have you kept in touch with him at all?"

"At first, yes—there was such a lot to do about your withdrawal from the firm. But for some months I have scarcely seen him."

"Any gossip about him?"

Wilson hesitated.

"Go on. I'm his friend—you can tell me."

"Well, sir, there's no doubt he's been pretty well nicked in the Street once or twice, and, well, it's only gossip, of course, but—"

"Come on, come on."

"I hear he's been drinking a good deal."

"Stanley got to his feet, walked to the window, and stood looking out.

"I'm afraid you never really liked him, did you Frank?"

Wilson wriggled a bit, and the other continued:

"I fear you never made many allowances for him. There's no real harm in Rollin. He's always getting into hot water, it's true; but it's always the result of his impulsive disposition. He always leaps before he looks. It's a quality I've sometimes envied him."

Wilson had definite ideas about the impulsiveness of Waterman. He was upon the point of opening up the entire subject of Waterman's affairs, when Stanley changed the subject abruptly.

"I say," he remarked, looking at the audiphone, "do you suppose this thing will work after all this time? Be fun if it would. Can't remember what I was dictating about that last day in the office. I suppose I thought it was mighty important then" He touched the machine lightly. "I can't even remember how to start it."

"Let me do it," said Wilson. "I've got one in the office now. Here's the way it works. If you want it to repeat what you have been saying you just push this lever. There—see?"

Instantly Stanley heard his own voice saying: "Of course there's always the possibility of error in these calculations, and it would be wise to allow a considerable margin of safety therefor. But on the whole we are in a position to say that we think well of the proposition. If you wish, I shall be glad to discuss the matter at length and in detail. Very sincerely yours."

Stanley smiled his boyish smile. But the machine went busily on:

"Don't worry about that, I'll attend to the details."

"Splendid. I have only one slight suggestion to make as to the construction of your scenario."

"And what's that?"

"I don't like the name of your villain."

"You ought to, it's your own. . . ."

"Frank," cried Stanley, "stop that thing, stop it!"

Wilson obeyed. In amazement the two looked at each other. Presently Stanley, much puzzled, remarked, "That's not my voice."

"It was at first, sir."

"Yes, yes, I know—but after that somebody else spoke. What on earth do you make of it?"

"I don't know."

"What I mean is, after the dictation, after it said 'very sincerely yours,' it spoke in another voice."

"Two other voices, I thought, sir."

"Yes, I thought so, too. Did you recognize them?"

"I thought I did."

"Whose voices were they?"

"Well, sir, I should say that one of them was Mr. Waterman's."

"Yes, and the other voice was a woman's—didn't you think so?"

"Yes, sir, I did."

"Did you recognize it?"

"I think, sir, it was the voice of Nina Morgan."

"Rollin's secretary?"

"Yes, sir."

"I thought so, too, but I wondered if it was my imagination."

"No, sir. No doubt about it," Wilson assured him.

"But how do you account for it, Frank?"

"Well, you know this machine stood on your desk in the office that last afternoon until every one but me had left."

"Yes, yes," objected Stanley, "but I'm sure I stopped it after I finished dictating."

"Some one must have started it again. I remember going into your office after you left and finding Mr. Waterman and Miss Morgan talking there. Mr. Waterman was sitting on the corner of your desk. He might have started it by accident—some careless gesture or other—like this."

"Sitting on the corner of the desk, the secretary put his hand behind him, carelessly, as if for support and touched the starting lever of the machine, which instantly began to speak again.

"Stop it," cried Stanley irritably. Wilson obeyed him. But after a pause he inquired, "Aren't you going to hear the rest?"

"Stanley smiled a little uneasily. "I was thinking it's a bit like eavesdropping, isn't it?"

"Why, yes," agreed Wilson, "if we had reason to suspect anything would be said that we shouldn't hear. But it can't be anything but business—the business of the firm—your own firm."

"I suppose that's so," admitted Stanley. "Anyhow, I'm curious to hear it. If it's an offense against propriety, let's wink at it," he added with a grin. "Don't you tell on me, and I'll not tell on you."

"Wilson smiled, also. "I see, sir—we're two conspirators.

He shoved the cylinder back a bit, pressed the starting lever, and these were the words they heard:

"Glad to discuss the matter at length and in detail. Very sincerely yours."

"Don't worry about that, I'll attend to the details."

"Splendid. "I have only one slight suggestion to make as to the construction of your scenario."

"And what's that?"

"I don't like the name of your villain."

"You ought to, it's your own."

"That's the point."

"What are you getting at?"

"I suggest that you strike out the name of Rollin Waterman and substitute the name of James Stanley."

"What?"

"Precisely."

"You want me to tell Miss Colby that it is Stanley and not you?"

'Exactly."

"Stop it! Stop it!" cried Stanley again. He glared at Wilson. "Good God!" he added faintly, and abruptly sat down. Wilson could not utter a syllable. There was silence in the room for a time. Presently Stanley spoke. "It must be some kind of a joke!"

"A very poor one, I'll say," commented the other.

"But it must be, it must. Rollin—my old friend! Why, I've never been anything but generous to him in all my life. Why—I can't understand it." He put both hands to his head.

"Perhaps," suggested Wilson, "if we hear the rest it will all be explained."

Stanley caught at the suggestion. "Yes, yes, no doubt. Go on.". But as Wilson moved to start the machine again he cried, "No—wait—I'm afraid to hear it."

But Wilson had no intention of stopping there. "Surely, sir," he objected, "you can't stop now. It wouldn't be fair to Mr. Waterman or to anybody."

"I wish the thing had been destroyed," cried Stanley. "With all my heart I wish it had been destroyed, but you're right. We can't stop. Go on!"

A fateful silence followed. Then the alternating voices went on, steadily, relentlessly, each syllable beating like a hammer on Stanley's brain:

"Well—of all the—why on earth should I do that?"

"I'll tell you. Because you're a business woman. Look here now, if you tell Doris Colby the truth you'll be getting nothing but revenge on me."

"I expect to get something else for not telling her the truth."

"Well, you won't get it."

"No?"

"No, because I haven't got it. Now listen—I'm practically down and out."

"You're a member of this firm."

"Nomenay, but my interest is so small if barely gives me a decent living. Stanley owns the works, he's the lad with the money—always has been. What's worse, I owe everybody in the world. I'm short a lot of stocks in a bull market—I'll be wiped out tomorrow if the rise goes on. In short, I'm all in. Only one thing can save me—marriage to a rich woman. And Doris Colby is just that—a very rich woman. Now you stick by me, and I'll stick—"

Silence fell upon the room like a blow.

"Go on, go on, go on!" groaned Stanley, grinding his teeth, but the secertary answered:

"That's all there is. The cylinder was used up."

There was a long silence before Wilson heard, in a voice he scarcely recognized: "I can't believe it. I can't believe my own ears. Rollin, my friend!"

"It's clear enough," said Wilson quickly. "Nina Morgan went to Miss Colby and told her this vile slander. Miss Colby turned you down and married Waterman."

"I can't believe it," murmured Stanley. "Even now I can't believe it. And yet it accounts for so many things, little looks and phrases that passed between those two in the office. They meant nothing to me then, and now they all come back with a new and terrible meaning." He cudgled his memory. "Yes, yes—and that last night—the last time I saw her. When I entered the room Rollin and she were alone. She had just accepted him. I thought then she looked queer—not at all like a happy girl. She passed it off, but she was queer, just the same, and no wonder. That vile woman had just been there telling her this terrible tale about me, making me a monster in her eyes."

He tossed both hands in the air, and cried, "By G—d, I'll not sit down under this!" He crossed the room in three strides, seized Wilson by the elbow with a grip that hurt and said, "Look here, tell me everything that you know about him—I mean, since I went away."

At last Wilson had his opportunity, and he used it. Sunk into the depths of the big chair, Stanley, his face buried in his hands, heard him to the end. Then he spoke. To Wilson it was the voice of a stranger.

"In short, he's betrayed her as he betrayed me. I knew something was wrong when I saw her last night, but I never dreamed—how could I have dreamed?—it was like this. Frank, what's become of that girl?" he cried with a sudden burst of energy, "the Morgan girl, Nina Morgan—d—n her!"

"I don't know, sir. She never came back to the office after you went. I suppose he set her up an establishment somewhere."

"On Doris' money."

"I suppose so."

"And you've never seen her since?"

"No, sir, not to speak to."

"Find her! Find her! Spare nothing, stop at nothing, search the world—Only find that woman!"

He glared upon the secretary with such intensity that the little man was frightened. "Come, come, sir," he said, "you mustn't go on like this. Take hold of yourself."

"Yes, yes, you're right," said Stanley feverishly, "no use in getting wild. Now is the time for self-control." But there was little self-control about him.

"Frank, Frank," he went on. "Are you sure I'm awake, and that I haven't dreamed this damnable thing? For God's sake tell me it's
